No-Sew Footstool Slipcover

I picked up an old footstool for around twenty dollars. The fabric was old and needed to be recovered. Since the legs weren't in much better shape I decided to cover it instead of refinishing the whole stool. It took about 30 min and you can clean the cover by tossing it into the wash. This project can easily be used on a table as well.

Materials:

Enough fabric to cover the entire surface of the footstool plus and extra three inches on each side for a hem

Ribbon

Iron-on adhesive

Iron

Total Cost: $15

Total Time: 30 minutes

Directions: Place the fabric on top of the stool so it covers all sides evenly. Pin up the sides like you would cuff a pair of pants, making sure all sides are even and almost touch the floor. Remove from the stool and make your hems using the iron-on adhesive. Once done, place the cover in position on top of the stool. Cut two holes on either corner of the fabric and thread the ribbon through. Tie a bow and trim the ribbon edges with pinking shears.
